            Putting it all back together, the role of estrogens following traumatic brain injury (TBI)
            Kelli Duncan, Associate Professor of Biology and Director of Neuroscience & Behavior
            What happens after a TBI and what can be done to help? This talk will focus on Professor Duncan’s research examining the role of steroid hormones, specifically estrogens, on recovery from brain damage.
            Rockefeller Classroom 203

            The Bannon McHenry-James Merrill Collection at Vassar
            Head of Special Collections Ron Patkus will give a tour of the current Library exhibition.
            Attendees will learn about one of the great poets of the 20th century and his connections to Vassar.
            Meet in the front lobby of the Thompson Library

            Reconstructing Life and Death with Forensic Anthropology and Archaeology
            April Beisaw, Associate Professor of Anthropology Crime scenes are archaeological sites—they contain the remains of past human activity to be deciphered from disturbed environments, objects left behind, and bodies of those who perished there. This lecture will cover the basics of how anthropologists identify people from their skeletons and how archaeologists read crime scene photographs.
            Rockefeller 200

Launcher of Feminists: Remembering Linda Nochlin (1931-2017)
Frances Beatty ’70, Barbara (Suzy) Buenger ’70, Susan Casteras ’71, Alison Hilton ’70, Ann Northrup ’70, Carol Ockman, Professor of Art, Williams College Regardless of whether they were art history majors or encountered her only in a single lecture, those for AH105-106, other courses, seminars, discussions, or at gallery openings or political rallies, students found Linda Nochlin a woman of incredible dynamism, warmth, and erudition. A forceful teacher and a generous mentor who inspired generations of students into action, she remained a prolific and influential scholar of the social history of art and critic her entire life, an authority on many different artists and areas of modern and contemporary art, and a fomenter and founder of feminist art history in particular. Colleagues and members of the spring 1970 seminar on women invite audience participation to discuss and exchange personal recollections of the stellar Nochlin, her impact, and studying women and art at Vassar at large.

Commemorating the 19th Amendment: Looking Back and Looking Forward
Miriam Cohen, Professor of History on the Evalyn Clark Chair and Rebecca Edwards, Professor of History on the Eloise Ellery Chair
Faculty will begin by exploring the 1820s to the 1880s, situating suffrage in the context of the broader women’s rights movement. They will then consider the years leading up to the 19th amendment and provide a sense of how historians are now broadening their understanding of who participated in the movement, what the movement accomplished and what remained as part of a continuing struggle. Issues of civil rights and the Voting Rights Act of 1965 will also be discussed.
Taylor, 203

Learning How to Bounce Back
Michele Tugade ’95, Professor of Psychological Science Resilience and healthy coping mechanisms are two keys to happiness in life. Professor Tugade has dedicated much of her professional life to studying and examining how people confront and respond to stressful situations. She will spend this hour sharing what she’s learned through studies that spanned from NASA astronauts to Vassar students.

Rockefeller, 200

The Cathedral of the Future: Notre-Dame of Paris
Lindsay Cook ’10, Visiting Assistant Professor of Art
The devastating April 2019 fire that destroyed parts of the cathedral of Paris and weakened its structure left the world wondering what would happen next. A year on, Lindsay Cook ’10 discusses the past, present, and likely future of Notre-Dame and reflects on the Vassar community’s many ties to this magnificent Gothic cathedral. This session is offered in memory of Professor Andrew Tallon and coincides with the publication of Notre Dame Cathedral: Nine Centuries of History, Cook’s translation of Andrew Tallon’s and Dany Sandron’s 2013 book, originally published in French.

Taylor, 102

LGBTQ+VC

The Times They Are A-Changin: Social Change through Group Action, Then and Now
Robert Brigham, Professor of History on the Shirley Ecker Boskey Chair; Katherine Hite, Professor of Political Science on the F. Thompson Chair and Director of Research; Justin Patch, Assistant Professor of Music; and David Schalk, Professor Emeritus of History
During the 1960s, many students took to the streets to protest the war in Vietnam or to voice their support for women’s rights, gay rights, Black power, and environmental protection. Those who did not still experienced the reverberations of this forceful anti-establishment spirit. By the time Class of 1970 graduated in 1970, such efforts had begun to have an impact on public policies and public opinions. Though the soundtrack has changed, the last two decades have seen a resurgence of group action related to foreign wars, climate change, immigration reform, women’s reproductive/workplace rights, criminal justice reform and law enforcement’s use of deadly force against people of color. Former and current Vassar faculty members will discuss how the turmoil of these movements affected alumnae/i, a half century ago and perhaps to this day.
Rockefeller, 300
